Caffeinated Christianity

It is pretty common knowledge that I like coffee. There is nothing quite like that hot brew in the morning when one eye refuses to open. Others must share my same discovery since coffee is so popular today. Each day millions of people start their morning with a cup of java to stimulate their bodies and brains. A sleepy morning is transformed into a focused day with a swallow of caffeine. In fact, it was that very stimulation that caused coffee to be discovered.

The most popular legend of the discovery of coffee tells us of an Ethiopian goat herder named Kaldi who lived hundreds of years ago. One day he blew his flute to gather the goats, but the goats did not come, so he climbed higher to find where they were. He heard them bleating and soon discovered the goats jumping and dancing on their hind legs while they ate berries and leaves from a bush that Kaldi had never seen before. The herder was afraid that the berries were poisonous and thought the goats would die. The next day, however, all the goats were alive and when he took them back to the mountain they immediately returned to the strange bush and began to eat the beans again. This time Kaldi decided to try them himself. After eating some of the beans he too began to be frisky and supposedly danced with the goats. Sometime later he opened up a Starbucks on the hill and the rest is history, (I like the end of that story a latte).

Seriously, it is no secret that caffeine awakens the body's senses. Wouldn't it be great if our spiritual senses could be awakened like that? How often our lives seem so sleepy. We go through the motions of each day responding to the responsibilities and expectations that are before us. There can be a lifeless type of repetition that can creep into our days. Our spiritual life can also begin to fit this pattern. Picture a Christian who lives by Christian principles. He goes to church and serves in several ways. He prays every morning on the way to work and periodically reads his Bible or a devotional book. But at the end of the day, his emotional and spiritual frame of mind is not much different than his non-Christian coworkers or neighbors. How can this be? How can a person who has received God's grace by faith and become a "new creation" live in a consistent state of spiritual and emotional boredom? How can such a dull life issue from such a dramatic transformation? Is there "caffeine" for a soul like this? Maybe the spiritual revving we need is found in a simple but often overlooked word: wonder.

The gospel accounts of the resurrection of Jesus Christ show common themes. One predominate theme is fear. Six times in the four gospel accounts there is a reference to fear. In two cases this is a picture of Roman guards who are afraid; they are literally scared to death. But in the other cases, especially with the women who had come to the tomb, their fear was more like amazement. They were told to "fear not", which could be paraphrased, "don't be scared". Any fright they may have had was transformed into amazement at the Resurrected Jesus. They were full of wonder. Easter reminds us that wonder should be a regular part of a believer's life because Jesus Christ is still alive. As the song says, "we serve a risen Savior, he's in the world today." If we really believe that, we can't help but be awakened by wonder.

Think back in your life. When did you experience the greatest amount of wonder? It was probably when you were a child. In fact, the years of youth are called "the wonder years." When my girls were small, they were filled with amazement at creation and life itself. A bug, a cloud, a blade of grass, became an object of wonder. Such wonder comes natural to a child before she grows up to a life grounded in the predictable and repetitive. That is the reason adults don't experience wonder as easily as children. Adults are all about analyzing, controlling and managing life. Our minds are cluttered with information and data that must be processed, that is why we are often left with no mental margin to reflect on the greatness and glory of God. The resurrection of Jesus Christ cannot be managed or controlled. Here is where the wonder steps in.

I love one of Webster's definitions of wonder. It reads, "rapt attention or astonishment at something awesomely mysterious or new to one's experience." How would you like to live your life like that? Sounds exciting! What a powerful alternative to the "life in the trenches" we often bemoan. Wonder is a stimulant to a person's spirit. It is the awakening to a creation filled with life and potential because there is a Creator who is active and present in this world, and a Savior who is alive and with us.

So, tomorrow morning, don't merely start your day with a cup o' Joe, but take a deep drink of Living Water. As you approach Easter, ask God to help you "get lost" again in the wonder of the Resurrection of Jesus, of creation, of salvation, of the miracle that we can be called "children of God". You will find, if you do, a new lilt to life as your spirit dances throughout the day with a sense of amazement.

TRUTH

We believe the Truth is found in our Savior and Lord, Jesus Christ, as the living Word of God and in the Bible as the written Word of God.

Jesus took the Wheel

The summer between my 8th and 9th grade years, Mama let me spend the night with my friend Donna. Her sister, who had recently turned 16, had a friend over as well. The Friday before I went to my friend's house, Mama bought me my very first "big girl" lip gloss. It was in a glass vial with a rolling ball to release the clear strawberry fragrancd gloss. Between that, and the fact that we were going to get to cruise around Elkin on Saturday night, I thought I had truly arrived.

On Saturday, Karen's Dad handed her the keys to his Ford LTD and told her our curfew. He had just finished paying for the car, and had dropped the collision insurance. It was beautiful. Karen and Lisa (the 16 year olds) rode up front, and Donna and I (two 14 year olds going on 20) rode in the back. We rode around Elkin countless times. I do not know why that was so exciting, but it was great fun. Every few minutes I reapplied my lipgloss, because, as a 14 year old, you can never apply too much. Right?

We were having such a great time that we lost track of it, so Karen took a shortcut back to her house (Rena Road). It was a narrow, crooked road, but it would cut time off our trip. An animal of some kind ran out in front of us, and Karen lost control of the car. She was thrown into the floorboard as the car became airborne. I had my lipgloss in my hand at the time. I did not know everything that was going on, but when I felt myself being thrown forward, my Mama yelled "Lay down Ginger!!", so I did. The car seats had detached from their bases, and we were all beaten up pretty badly, but we all limped away from the accident. A farmer and his wife heard the crash and called for the ambulance. We were taken to the hospital, but were released to our parents that night. Lisa had stitches in her lip, Donna and Karen were bruised up, and I looked like someone had beat me all over with a baseball bat. We were all very sore the next day, and me being the most noticeably bruised one, I questioned the wisdom of minding my Mama's voice. To add insult to injury I had lost my lip gloss.

That day a sheriff's deputy met us and our parents at the scene of the accident. Driving itself, the car had missed a barn by about 3 inches or so. Then, it landed on a makeshift road the farmer had made that led to his pond. Just a few feet from going into the pond, the car had turned to the left and wrapped its front end around a small tree. Each step the car made on its own saved our lives. As we were looking at the car's final resting place, I looked down and there was my lipgloss, unharmed. I picked it up and stuck it in my pocket thinking not all was lost.

Next, we drove to where the car had been taken. The mangled car did not look like the car of survivors. In addition, the front windshield, cracked like a clear mosaic, had a big bulge on the passenger's side. Turns out both Lisa and Donna had been thrown into it in the same spot. The deputy said that if one more person had hit it, they would have surely gone through it and probably been killed. He reminded us several times at both the crash site and at the car how lucky we were to be alive. However, I realized at that moment that had Mama not yelled for me to lay down (No, Mama was not with us) I would have been that third person. Luck had nothing to do with it. I tell you now that not even a 14 year old missed that miracle. Jesus was at the wheel.

"People may argue the facts, but they cannot argue with your experience. They cannot argue with your personal testimony".

-Gregg Hunter (Fort Howard Community Church)

2 Timothy 1:8 So do not be ashamed of the testimony about our Lord or of me his prisoner. Rather, join with me in suffering for the gospel, by the power of God.

From Sydney

During February, the children talked about how much Jesus loves us! We learned about the importance of showing God's love to others. We had a wonderful time at the 70's themed lasagna fundraiser where we played bingo, had a lesson, and watched our own movie. We also had fun celebrating Valentine's Day with each other all month long.

Looking forward:

We have the Easter Egg Hunt coming up on March 30th at 11am-1pm!

SOMEBODY CARES

Somebody knows when your heart aches
And everything seems to go wrong;
Somebody knows when the shadows
Need chasing away with song;
Somebody knows when you're lonely,
Tired, discouraged and blue;
Somebody wants you to know Him,
And know that He dearly loves you.

Somebody knows when you're tempted,
And your mind grows dizzy and dim;
Somebody cares when you're weakest,
And farthest away from Him;
Somebody grieves when you've fallen,
You are not lost from His sight;
Somebody waits for your coming,
And He'll drive the gloom from the night.

Somebody loves you when weary,
Somebody loves you when strong,
Always waiting to help you,
He watches you — one of the throng.
Needing His friendship so holy,
Needing His watchful care so true;
His Name? We call His name "Jesus,"
He loves every one. He loves you.

Tony Reece loved and was proud of his family and enjoyed working on and showing off his vintage cars. He was an active member at Deep Creek Friends Meeting and was present and involved. He was a helper that seemed to enjoy his work whatever and wherever it was. He was a choir member and part of the Quaker Men groups. He also spent many hours and made many friends traveling and volunteering with North Carolina Friends Disaster Service, along with many others building and repairing homes for those who had experienced a disaster. He also enjoyed a laugh and was quick to share a little smile. His presence will be missed.
